Market Analysis - December 23, 2004

Michael Haigh-Assistant Professor University of MD Cooperative Extension

Corn was up 3 cents last week (we will take whatever price rise we can) in a week that was decidedly uneventful. With no surprises in the December report, traders see no reason to trade outside of a reasonable bound of the current price. Only weather problems in South America could really change things. On Monday traders continued to cautiously trade and most stayed on the sidelines for the holiday shortened trading weeks. Some traders believe that the market will remain range bound between $2.01 and $2.09 until the start of next year. The only worldwide fundamental that is noteworthy right now is that grain and oilseed demand is at a record high around the world. World supplies are also large and stocks continue to be built. Soybeans jumped higher as of Monday of last week but traded in a sideways pattern for the remainder of the time. On Monday of this week soybeans were up modestly despite a sharp rally prompted by commercial selling. The buying side was attributed to funds covering short positions, with additional support coming from sales to China. By the middle of this week beans were trading in a very narrow range. Reports that cash bids at the Gulf were firming moved prices a tiny amount but that was about all the information futures traders got. On Wednesday beans drifted lower and lower but it was an incredibly lackluster session and many traders were just absent due to the holidays. Nothing to trade, and so, nothing to write about! So, onto wheat: wheat also traded in a sideways market last week. Some traders believe that this is the one market that has the potential to move higher in the short run as the wet fall weather kept soft red winter plantings slow, but having said that, wheat continues to struggle due to a lack of demand news. Foreign tenders and bids are frequently discussed but they seem to fail to materialize. Wheat, unlike the other two finished this week with an upward move but that was driven by hardly any trading – so there was no fuel behind the fire, so to speak. Cash trade is also non-existent as both cash and futures traders have gone home early for the holidays. Which leaves me nothing more to say other than: HAPPY HOLIDAYS!
